Artist's Statement

At age fourteen I started my career as a self-taught painter in oils. I was inspired by a book on Greek mythology illustrated by Maxfield Parrish & some reproductions of works by various members of the Hudson River School. By the time I was old enough to consider art school, the focus was on non-representational art, which did not interest me.

I turned to a career in product illustration & then to art direction & creative work in advertising. After years in the commercial art world, I recently returned to painting almost full time. There's nothing like creating a successful painting. Success can be making a seemingly dull thing beautiful or capturing the feel of a particular place, the drama of a cloudy sky, or the look of a foreign place where I see both the differences & similarities of life in other countries.

I'm enjoying the opportunity to paint & explore the challenges of creating art.
